Minutes of meeting of January 18th 1938 were called to order at 7:30 P.M. The 588th meeting of the Rochester Numismatic Association was held on January 18th 1938, at the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences, with President Peake presiding.

Minutes of the two preceding meetings were read and approved. Mr. Lindboe reported that he had paid a visit to retiring President Powers, and is rather discouraged about his condition. He also extended greeting from Mr. Clark and Mr. Wood whom he recently visited in New York City.

Mr. Kolb reported that the cost of striking medals this year is increased to $1.10 each, making the net cost to the Club $2.50. Actually these medals are worth $4.00 but are reduced to us as Mr. Kolb has considered the Club when submitting his bill. There were 35 bronze and 5 silver medals ordered. Medals will continue to sell for $2.00 to Club members even though there has been an increase in the cost.

Mr. Lindboe moved and Mr. Babin second that all old committee be discharged. CARRIED.

President Peake appointed the following new committees:-

Purchasing Committee-
Mr. Geo. Bauer, Chairman
Mr. A. Plumb
Mr. G. Lindboe

Membership Committee.
Mr. J. Sloane, Chairman
Mr. E. Meinhart
Mr. A. Donley

Publicity Committee.
Mr. B. Greene

Curator Assistants.
Mr. J. Cohen. (Librarian)
Mr. J. Greendyke Jr.
Asst. Curator.

In discussing the matter of new members it was decided to publish applicants name in meeting notice before presenting name to our meeting.

Until it proves unsatisfactory, the auction will be limited to a period of one hour, or a total of 100 lots, with no limit set to the number of lots one individual may submit. All coins not sold will be held over until the next meeting.

President Peake told members that he believed, with the help of the Museum, the coin room could be made into an ideal room in which to hold our meetings. This would be done by removing the armor, which we have been informed is to be returned to the loaner, building two special display cases with flat tops that can also be used as meeting tables, a floor covering that will be more homelike, pictures of some kind, preferably illustrating phases of the history of money, the improvement the improvement of the Club collection and Library. All this will intale some expense to the Club, but there is every reason to believe that the big share of it will be assumed by the Museu After considerable discussion on the relative merits of ways and means of raising the necessary funds, one of which was ~~xxxx~~ increasing dues it was decided to appoint a committee to inquire into the suggestion made by Mr. Studley, that of having an exhibit of coins and medals in some store and charge a ~~small~~ admission. The following committee was appointed:- Mr. Studley Mr. Amberg, Mr. Weisbush and Mr. Babin. This committee was appointed after Mr. Amberg moved and Mr. Cohen second that $75.00 be made available to the Club officers to be used at thier discretion, to help with the Museum in adapting the coin room, collection and library to a suitable place to hold meetings CARRIED.

ROCHESTER NUMISMATIC ASSN

MEETING NOTICE

The 589th meeting of the Rochester Numismatic Association will be held on February 1st 1938 at the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences, Edgerton Park.

We hope soon, with the co-operation of the Museum, to have changes made in the coin room so that we can hold our meetings there. With the armor, which takes up so much room at present, moved, and two special flat top display cases, that may be used as tables, made for the center of the room, we will have an ideal place in which to meet. We are sure you will agree that the coin room will be much more agreeable than our present hall.

There will be a half hour discussion period during our next meeting at which time questions which are puzzling you will be answered. Bring in the pieces which you would like some information on and let's make this an instructive and interesting period.

If you have not purchased your copy of the 25th R.N.A. Presidential Medal get it at the next meeting. It has an excellent likeness of retiring President Powers.

AUCTION as usual after the meeting.
Help make the auction more successful
by bringing in material.

Do you have any Lincoln Medals?
If so bring them in, for exhibit.

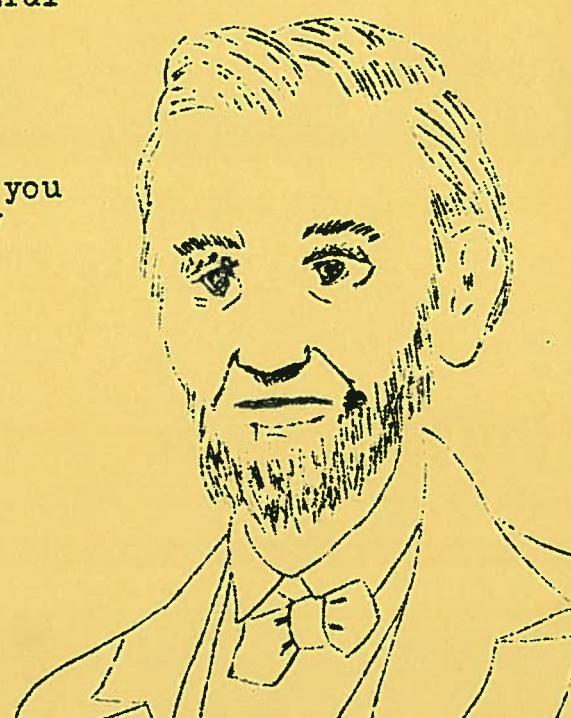

Dues for 1938 are now payable. If you are not at meeting and wish to pay them, make check payable to,

Minutes of meeting of February 1st 1938

The 589th meeting of the Rochester Numismatic Association was held on February 1st 1938, at the Rochester museum of Arts and Sciences, with President Peake presiding.

Minutes of previous meeting read and approved.

The Committee on Store Exhibit reported some progress, but as they have not had a meeting their final report will be withheld until the next meeting.

Several of the members gave their opinion on the matter and it would seem that the general feeling is not in favor of an exhibit in a store.

Mr. Lindboe reported that he had accepted a donation from Mr. Charles Sterns for the Club collection. This consists of a bronze and lead Washington Medal, a Proof Masonic Washington Medal, nine cent size hard time tokens of the 1837 variety, and eight Civil War Tokens. These pieces are all in very fine condition and are a good addition to our collection. Some of them are duplicates, but as they are better than those we have in our collection they will make very good exchanges.

Membership Chairman Sloane reported the following two applications accompanied with checks, Harold Stone, 256 Canterbury Rd. Attorney, and George Hoffenberg, 270 So. Goodman St. also an Attorney. Both of these applications were presented by Armond Weisbush. As the names of these two applicants had been published in a previous meeting notice, Mr. Cohen moved and Mr. Amberg second that they be accepted. CARRIED.

Letter from Mr. Waldo Moore relative to his desire to be appointed to the position of Secretary of the A.N.A. read. Mr. Bauer moved that the letter be received and placed on file and that it be acknowledged by the secretary.

Mr. Cohen reported that the books in our library are being cataloged and he expects to have it completed for the next meeting.

President Peake announced that Mr. Bauer will act as auctioneer for the comming year. Mr. Bauer made some objections, however said he would accept the assignment at least temporarily.

President Peake asked for volunteers to present a paper at Club meetings and received the following excellent results, Feb. 15th Mr. Studley, Mar. 1st Mr. Cohen, Mar. 15th Mr. Bauer Apr. 5th Mr. Donley, Apr. 19th Mr. Sloane, May 3rd Mr. Meinhart May 17th Mr. Hayes, June 7th Mr. Bloom.

In response to the request that members bring in Lincoln Medals for exhibit, we were treated to two collections brought in by Mr. Bauer and Mr. Studley.

Meeting was then adjourned to the reffle and auction.

Wm. A. Elston, Secretary.

Our last meeting was very well attended and there were several faces there which we have not seen in some time. Your officers were pleased about this and hope future meetings will bring out more of you members who do not attend regularly.

We also had a dandy exhibit of Lincoln Medals. Let's see if we can have a better exhibit of Washington Medals at our next meeting.

To help make our meetings more interesting and instructive the following members have volunteered to prepare papers, which I am sure, will be of interest to all of us

MEETING NOTICE

The 596th meeting of the Rochester Numismatic Association will be held on May 17th 1938 at the Rochester Museum of Arts and Sciences, Edgerton Park. Meeting to be called at 8:00 P.M.

Mr. Hayes will be the speaker of the evening and I am sure will have some interesting information to give us. Let's make a good showing for him.

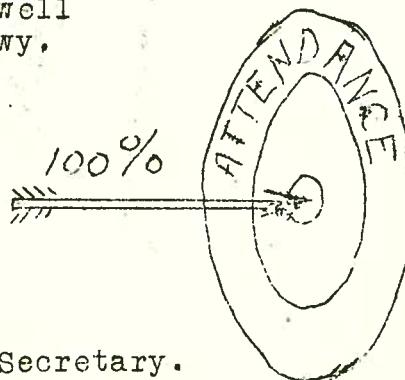

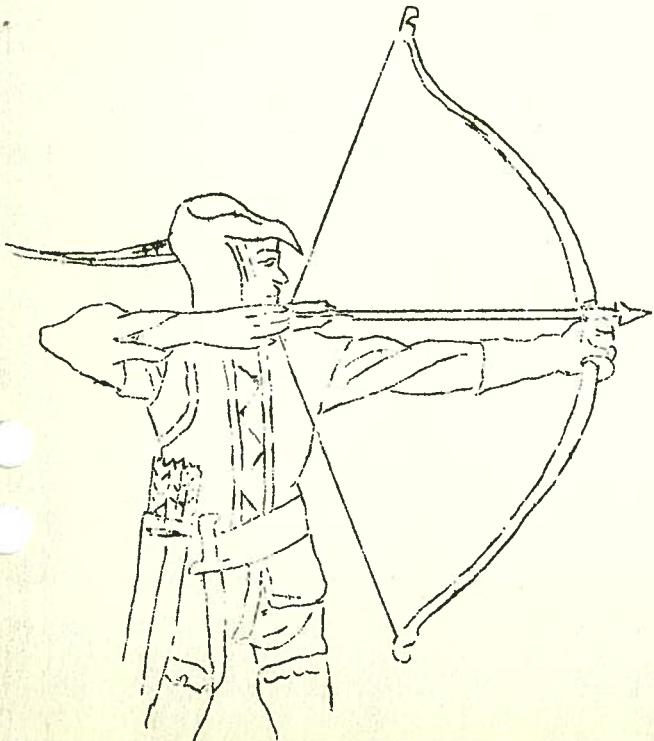

We are begining to have nice weather now but dont get so enthusiastic about working in the garden that it is too late to attend meeting. Remember the better attendance we have at meeting the more value it is to all of us.

According to the attendance book we held nineteen meetings last year. Mr. Sloane attended every meeting during the year. Messrs Plumb, Kell and Elston missed only one, and Messrs Bauer, Powers and Babin only two. These are enviable records and a good mark for all of us to shoot at.

Auction as usual at this meeting. Bring in material, the more there is to sell the better the auction

Application pending.

Mr. Floyd Newell

Moved by Mr. Babin and second by Mr. Hayes that the application of Mr. Floyd Newell of No. 94 Monroe Pkwy. be accepted. CARRIED.

President Peake spoke of the disadvantage of having the Club library in the safe with the Club coins and suggested as a possible solution the purchase of a cheap bookcase. Mr. Bloom offered to donate a cabinet which he has if it is acceptable to the Club. This cabinet has five or six shelves and will need a lock installed. His offer was accepted with much thanks. Thru his offer he has saved the Club $5.00 or $6.00 as that is the least we could expect to purchase a suitable cabinet for.

Mr. Hayes presented a paper on the history of money which ^{was} both interesting and instructive.

Meeting adjourned to the raffle and auction.

Secretary's Report for 1938

At the end of another successful year it gives me great pleasure to make the following report.

With the co-operation of Dr. Parker and his staff the Coin Room, in the Museum, has been renovated so that it makes an ideal meeting place. This work has not been completed and we hope to make the surroundings more pleasant during the coming year. As it is, I doubt if there is another Club which has a meeting place comparable to ours.

We held twenty-one meetings during the year, two of these being outing meetings held at Point Peake. Meetings were generally well attended. The attendance record was not taken at the Aug. 6th meeting and the following figures are based on ignoring that meeting so far as attendance is concerned.

Mr. Blasb^t and Mr. Elston had a perfect attendance during the year. Mr. Peake, Mr. Babin and Mr. Amberg missed one meeting. Mr. Sloane missed ~~two~~^{one} meetings and Mr. Lindb^o and Mr. Kolt missed three meetings.

Our average attendance for the year was twenty-two members and three visitors at each meeting.

Two of our 1937 members failed to renew their membership and eleven new members were accepted during the year, making a net gain of nine and giving us a membership of fifty as of today. There is one application pending.

Respectfully submitted
John P. Galt, Secretary.

A Celebration for Swedes

By William F. Sunday

ONE of the most recent issues of commemorative coins is that for the Delaware Tercentenary celebration to be held in Wilmington in June on the 300th anniversary of the landing of Swedish settlers in Delaware.

The first permanent settlement in the Delaware River Valley was made by Swedish colonists in the year 1638 at "The Rocks," now within the city of Wilmington. This anniversary will be celebrated by the states of Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, the federal government and the Kingdom of Sweden.

The design on the obverse side of the coin shows a sailing vessel, the Kalmar Nyckel, the ship in which the Swedish colonists arrived in this country. Kalmar Nyckel translated means Key of Kaimar, Kaimar being a city on the coast of Sweden. The design of the ship was made from a model now in the Swedish Naval Museum. The three diamonds used for punctuating the inscription are said to represent the three counties of Delaware—New Castle, Kent and Sussex. The reverse side shows the old Swedes Church at Wilmington, erected in 1698 and still standing adjacent to "The Rocks" in the city of Wilmington.

The coin was designed by Carl L. Schmitz, who was born at Metz, France, Sept. 9 1900. He became a sculptor's apprentice at 14. In 1923 he came to America to continue his studies at the Beaux Arts Institute of Design, New York. He is an American citizen and is a member of the National Sculptor Society. Twenty-five thousand coins are authorized to be coined.

A medal has been issued by the Delaware Tercentenary Commission for the celebration. The obverse shows the Kalmar Nyckel, and the reverse shows the Delaware seal. The medals will be struck in two sizes, one in bronze and the other in bronze and silver. They were designed by Maxfield H. Keck.

Piracy Created Coin Issue

By William F. Sunday

RECENT reports point to piracy in the Mediterranean.

However, piracy is nothing new on placid blue waters of this famous sea, for back in 4 B. C. a pirate ruled the Mediterranean.

His name was Sextus Pompey, youngest son of Pompey the Great. Shortly after his father was defeated by Julius Caesar at the battle of Pharsalus, Sextus fled to safety in Spain where he supported himself by outright robbery. He subdued the Province of Baetica. He then proceeded to build a fleet of ships and established his supreme sea power on the Mediterranean. Immediately after the assassination of Caesar on March 15, B. C. 44, Sextus proceeded to oppose the triumvirate formed to rule the vast Roman dominions. He organized a blockade of the Italian coast and plundered all shipping. Food became scarce, prices skyrocketed, and the capitol was in great danger of famine.

The Romans with no navy of their own, found it necessary to make peace with Sextus. By the terms of the treaty Sextus received a large fortune to compensate him for the loss of his patrimony which had been sold by Caesar at public auction. He also received the title of admiral of the Roman navy.

Exit, Chief Iron Tail

By William F. Sunday

THE noble profile of Chief Iron Tail of the Sioux Indians no longer will grace the new nickels clinking out of Uncle Sam's mint.

According to Treasury Department reports, the new design for 5-cent pieces will include the portrait of Thomas Jefferson on one side and a view of his home at Monticello, Va., on the other.

Exit the "Buffalo" Nickel

It is just 25 years since the current type of our five-cent coin was first issued for circulation. The law provides that coin designs may not be changed often than 25 years except by special act of Congress. After designs have been used 25 years they may be changed by the secretary of the treasury and the director of the mint without authority of Congress.

The now familiar "Buffalo" nickel first made its debut in 1913 when, on Feb. 17, regular coinage commenced with the operation of one press which produced coins at a rate of 120 per minute. The designs were the work of James Earl Fraser, of New York City. It is said that Fraser took as a model for the Indian head, Chief Iron Tail of the Sioux Indians, who was visiting New York at the time in connection with a wild west show known as 101 Ranch. The old chief was very proud of the fact that his features were selected as most nearly typifying the Indian of history and tradition.

Again Sextus attacked Roman shipping and soon the people were faced with the specter of famine which found the population in an ugly mood. They insisted upon immediate peace, which resulted in a treaty whereby the provinces of Sicily, Corsica, Sardinia and Achaea were ceded to Sextus. He also received a huge indemnity payment for his private coffers.

Sextus on his part was to supply Italy with food and protect its shipping. Antony, however, refused to give up the Province of Achaea and hostilities were resumed. Octavian built another fleet, but shortly after the vessels were launched and on their way to engage Sextus in battle, the entire armada was destroyed by a storm. Another attempt, in which Octavian proposed to use three fleets to attack Sextus from different sides was frustrated when two of them were wrecked by storm and the third by Sextus.

Finally, a third attempt to crush Sextus was successful. This time Octavian entrusted the command of his fleet to Agrippa, friend of his boyhood, who inflicted a crushing defeat upon the enemy. Sextus' fleet was destroyed, his power broken, and he was forced to flee to Asia where an Oriental satrap put him to death.

As a reward for his success in breaking Sextus' naval supremacy and freeing Italy from the danger of famine, Agrippa received the naval crown.

In commemoration of this historic event a coin was issued with the profile of Agrippa on one side wearing the naval crown, while the figure of Neptune on the reverse alludes to Agrippa's great naval successes.

Competitive Coinage

By William F. Sunday

THE difficulties hampering trading in the pioneer days of the West afford an interesting contrast between the past and present. The pioneers who went to Colorado in 1858 and settled in the Pike's Peak region brought little money with them but had need of little, for nearly everything was acquired by trading. However, early the next year gold was discovered, resulting in a gold rush and a large influx of prospectors.

Soon gold dust and nuggets became the leading medium of exchange. But this practice proved a nuisance in small dealings, as it necessitated the use of delicate scales with Troy weights to determine the value of the gold-dust. Nuggets had to be tested as to fineness in order to determine their value.

Therefore the need of some more convenient form of money finally resulted in the establishment of a private mint in Denver in 1860.

This first mint was erected by Clarke, Gruber & Company, private bankers, who conceived the idea of establishing a bank and mint combined where the gold could be converted into coin. The first coins struck in the new institution were of $10 and $20 denominations. These were struck in pure gold and were equal in weight to the $10 and $20 dollar gold pieces issued by the government mint at Philadelphia, but were of greater value because they contained no alloy. These were accepted at par in Colorado. The design on this first issue showed a view of Pike's Peak with the word Denver just below. Around the border the inscription, "PIKE'S PEAK GOLD NO. TWENTY D." On the reverse side appears an eagle device and the words "CLARK GRUBER & CO. 1860."

The following year the $2.50 and $5 denominations were added and the designs were changed to the Liberty Head type. All of the coins then struck were alloyed according to government standards, because it was discovered that the first issue of pure gold was too soft and easily braded in circulation.

In a period of less than two years the Clark-Gruber firm minted and put into circulation about 8,000,000 of its coins. The increased output of the mines caused the Gruber mint to become a serious rival of the government's own coinage. This led to discussion as to propriety of money coined by private firms. The Secretary of the Treasury suggested to the President that the coinage laws be amended to prohibit private coining. This resulted in legislation depriving the Denver institution of the authority to coin money.

However, the Clarke - Gruber venture is largely responsible for the establishment of a branch government mint at Denver, and even today the names of Austin M. and Milton E. Clarke, brothers, and E. H. Gruber, who composed the original firm are spoken of as symbolic of honesty and full worth as were their gold coins made in the early days of Colorado.

The old coining presses now repose in the Colorado State Historical Society, while most of the coins they produced have disappeared via the melting pot. Some still are found in collections of numismatists and some have been preserved in museums. Choice specimens of the first issue (1860) bring considerable over face value today.

China Coins Come to U. S.

Silver coins of China have been shipped to this country in payment for war supplies. On February 21 a steamer reached Boston with 2,646 boxes of Chinese silver coins sent here to pay for war supplies for defense against Japanese invasion. This is the ninth such shipment to arrive here since last November, bringing the total to about 90,000,000 ounces. The coins were gathered in by the Chinese Government in its shift to a paper money basis. They were shipped by the London agency for the Bank of China.

So you think "wooden nickels" are a joke? Then look at the reproduction of those used in St. Petersburg, Fla., this year as novel feature of a golden jubilee festival.

Wooden Nickels' No Joke

By William F. Sunday

THE popular admonition, "Don't take any wooden nickels," was an obsolete phrase during the Golden Jubilee Festival of the States of St. Petersburg, Fla. In fact everybody was urged to take wooden nickels, and their circulation made a lot of money toward financing the sunshine city's big annual celebration.

Stamped on wood in one nickel, two nickels, and five nickels denominations, the wooden money was purchased in large quantities by merchants, collectors and individuals for circulation and for souvenirs. Although used for cash, and redeemable for face value at the end of the festival, the nickels quickly passed out of circulation, and the result was a handsome profit for the festival committee.

Endorsed by the St. Petersburg Merchants Association, the wooden money was offered at shops and other places of business in lieu of change and was accepted as cash from customers.

Rectangular in shape, the wooden nickels were two by four inches in dimension. On the face was the special seal of the Golden Jubilee Festival of States celebration, and on the reverse the seal of the City of St. Petersburg and the promise to redeem the nickels at face value over the signatures of the mayor, the president of the Chamber of Commerce and the chairman of the festival.

Demand for the wooden nickels exceeded all expectations of the committee, several printings being necessary to supply all who wanted them. Total issue was $2,000 face value. There were 14,000 one-nickel pieces, 8,000 two-nickel pieces and 2,000 five-nickel pieces.

Coin Collectors' Convention

The ninth annual Tri-State meeting of coin, stamp and curio collectors at Jamestown, N. Y., June 10 to 12, inclusive, set an attendance record for a gathering of this kind. Over 300 collectors were represented from 22 states. More than a million dollars' worth of rare coins and postage stamps were on display and many rare old guns, antiques and Indian relics were exhibited.

The 'Indian' Was White

By William F. Sunday

HOW many persons know that the Indian head on our cent is not that of an Indian? Despite feathered headdress, the face is that of a little Anglo-Saxon girl, daughter of James Barton Longacre, chief engraver of the United States Mint from 1828 to 1858.

How her profile came to adorn the lowly copper has been related by her father. In the year 1858 the mint announced a proposed change in design, and competition was open for sketches and engravings for the new bronze cent. The prize was substantial and competition keen. Over a 1000 designs were submitted.

Mr. Longacre racked his brain for some original and singular design. But for months he failed. However, one morning a number of Indians who had been to pay their respects to the "great white chief" in Washington, came to Philadelphia and were being shown through the mint. They were introduced to Mr. Longacre who happened to be showing his daughter, Sarah, some of his work. The old chief was attracted by the sweet-faced maiden and her manifested interest in paint and his feather war bonnet. She gazed in childish wonder and expressed a desire to see how she would look in the feathered headgear.

This was explained to the chief, who solemnly divested himself of his feathers and placed them on the girl's head. The effect was so striking that her father sketched the picture she presented, which he afterwards finished for his own amusement. Barely before the close of the period for submitting engravings for the new cent design, it occurred to him that the combination of Indian feathers and Saxon loveliness had possibilities. So he entered it. The sketch passed through several siftings during the judging and finally reached the last round, where by one vote the Longacre design won.

Thus a 12-year-old girl enjoyed the distinction of having her profile appear on all the one-cent pieces struck from 1858 to 1909. Billions of these coins were issued and it is said that Sarah Longacre's image was reproduced more times than that of any woman who ever lived.

Some of the earlier dates command a premium if in finely-preserved condition. Those minted from 1864 to

"Liberty" Head Nickel Myth

When the Liberty head type nickel was discontinued in the latter part of 1912, dies had been prepared bearing the date 1913 and a half-dozen nickels were struck to test the die early in 1913. However, no regular coinage was issued from these dies as the "Buffalo" type had been adopted and was used for general circulation. However, the fact that six specimens were known to exist, bearing the "Liberty" head and dated 1913, was given much publicity by certain coin dealers which brought about the craze for finding 1913 Liberty head nickels.

The public might have been spared the belief that any of these coins could be found in circulation, for despite diligent search none was rewarded for his efforts, regardless of numerous reports of purported 1913 Liberty nickels being found, (which were altered dates) not another genuine piece of this design dated 1913 has been found. Five of original coins from the 1913 dies are in the collection of the late Colonel Green and the sixth specimen was in the hands of a dealer when last reported.

Indian princess? . . . not at all! The girl beneath all the feathers on those millions of old copper cents is a white miss, daughter of the engraver who designed the "coppers."

Finest Specimens Extant Included in Display

By William F. Sunday

A N opportunity to view rare ancient Greek and Roman coins is presented to the public with the exhibition of the collection of the late Joseph Tilden Alling, now on display at the University of Rochester in the Rush Rhees library building on the River Campus.

This unusual treasure trove of historically interesting coins includes magnificent specimens of some of the earliest known struck money dating back to the Lydians, who are credited with invention of coinage. Nearly every period and ruler is repre-ented from about 600 B. C. to the Roman Republic. Coins made of bronze, silver, gold and "electrum" (part gold and silver), many of which are said to be the finest preserved specimens in existence, have been painstakingly attributed and labeled by Charles Doeing, dean emeritus, who also is responsible for the novel method of display which affords a view of both the obverse and reverse side of each coin with the aid of glass slide and a mirror background.

A gallery of notables is portrayed on the gold coins, including Julius Caesar, Nero, Hadrian, Marcus Aurelius, Ptolemy of Egypt. Possibly the outstanding of these is a gold octadrachm

The four dolphins surrounding the head indicate the sea surrounding her domain. The water of the spring is no longer sweet, volcanic disturbances due to the proximity of Mount Aetna having permitted the seepage of salt water. The reverse of the coin with its spirited chariot race is fully as interesting. The artist has shown the quadriga at a gallop with a figure of Victory crowning the charioteer. Below what serves as a base-line for the chariot group are pieces of captured armor—cuirass, greaves and helmet, beneath which appears the letters A O V A, the root of our word "athletics." This inscription, coupled with the armor supports the generally accepted dating of these pieces at about 413 B. C. In this year the Syracusans defeated the forces sent by Athens to capture the city and these "decadrachms" were issued in connection with the games celebrating the victory. The decadrachms of Syracuse generally are considered the finest examples of the Greek die-cutters' art. They were struck at the zenith of the city's power, and the two artists who executed the dies, Kimon and Euanatos, were the ablest Sicily ever produced.

NUMISMATIC NOTES

By William F. Sunday

ILLUSTRATED is a coin of the Roman Republic which recalls a stirring event in the history of the rise of Rome from a little village on the Yellow Tiber to a position of arbiter of the world's destiny.

The time was B.C. 168. Rome had by now conquered all of Italy and Sicily and was engaged with Carthage in a bitter struggle which ended a few years later with the total destruction of Carthage by the Roman legions under the command of Scipio Aemilianus, a son of Paullus, hero of the war.

In addition to subduing Carthage and removing it as a rival for world power, Rome continued on in an attempt to extend its boundaries eastward. She had by diplomacy made Greece an ally, and was now seeking by the force of arms to make Macedon a Roman province. For three years the Macedonians had successfully resisted the Roman legions, largely because of the incompetence of their leaders, and it seemed the efforts were doomed to failure.

However, in this crisis Lucius Aemilius Paullus was re-appointed consul to Rome and was sent to Macedon as commander-in-chief of the invading forces. Paullus soon justified his selection, and in the battle of Pydna, June 22, 168 B. C., utterly routed the Macedonian forces, capturing Perseus and his sons. The cities were sacked and the spoils sent to Rome. On Paullus' return the Senate granted him a public triumph, which was a magnificent affair, lasting three days, the very highest tribute that could be paid a Roman general.

Gala Celebration

The first day a huge procession marched through the streets, headed by the Consuls and Senate, followed by a band of trumpeters. Then followed wagons filled with captured treasures, pictures of the foreign lands and banners bearing the names of the conquered cities. The second day the wagons were filled with armor, trophies and other spoils of war, followed by men carrying bowls of silver coins and various utensils of silver taken away by the army.

But the third day was the climax. The procession was led

Isle of Man Coins Boast Three 'Legs'

By William F. Sunday

THE coins of the Isle of Man have three "legs."

The Isle of Man is in the Irish Sea, midway between England, Ireland, Wales and Scotland. From its earliest history, up to the 11th century, we know only that it was ruled at various times by Scandinavian, Scotch, Irish and English kings, but no coins were issued prior to the 18th century.

In 1709, James, the Earl of Derby, issued the first coins. These were crudely cast copper half-pence and pennies and bore the "triquetra" emblem on the reverse. On the obverse of these coins is the eagle and child above a cap, and the motto, "Sans Changer," which is the crest and motto of the House of Stanley. On the reverse is the "triquetra," the three-legged device of booted and spurred human legs bent at the knee as though running and joined at the hip to form a raidinating design. In the field are the words "Quocunque leceris Stabili." Freely translated it means, "Throw me as you will, I land on my feet."

The eagle with a child in his claws has an interesting origin. It is said that Sir Thomas de Lathom, early in the 14th century, was walking with his wife in a wild section of his estate when they heard the cries of a baby girl, which they traced to an eagle's nest high on the cliffs. The servants rescued the baby and, having no children of his own, Sir Thomas adopted her. When she died she left a daughter named Isabell, who married Sir John de Stanley. In memory of the event he made the eagle and child part of his crest.

The "triquetra" has a story which is over 2,000 years old, providing a continuous chain from the Athens of 600 B. C. to the Isle of Man in 1709 A. D. As far as can be ascertained the first use of human legs in this design seems to have been employed as a decorative motif on the black Athenian vases of the 6th century B. C. The Alcmaenidae family of Athens, powerful politically about the year 590 B. C., were known by the nickname of "White Legs" as the family device which they bore on their shields consisted of a white "triquetra."

About this period, coins of Athens appeared bearing the "triquetra" symbol, and again from 550 to 456 B. C. on the early coins of Aegina the triquetra is stamped incused. From this time on we find coins of Macedon, and Attica using the design. The symbol having traveled through many sections of Greece we find that in 317 B. C. Agathocles introduced the triquetra into the coinage and the arms of the two Sicilies. As late as 1812 Joachim Murat, ruler of the Sicilies, used it on his coins.

How this ancient device became that of the Isle of Man is revealed when we find that in the years from 1266 to 1286 King Alfred III of Scotland was King of Man and the Channel Islands, and his wife was a sister of the Queen of Sicily. This Sicilian connection therefore, explains how the triquetra happened to pass from the Island of Sicily to the Isle of Man.

The state sword used today in legal ceremonials was made in the 13th century and bears on its hilt this same device.

SEALSKIN BANK NOTE 'TOPS'

By William F. Sunday

JUST AS the sealskin coat is "tops" in milady's wardrobe, so a recently-discovered sealskin bank note is being rated by numismatists.

This odd type of money was used in Alaska during the Russian regime, and was among souvenirs brought back from Alaska by an army surgeon who was a member of the force which took possession after Seward's purchase of the territory in 1867.

It is printed in black ink on a piece of tanned sealskin, light yellow in color, and 2 1/2 by about 1 1/2 inches in dimensions. The obverse shows the seal of the Russian American Company with the denomination "One Ruble" below.

The reverse side of the note bears an engine-turned oval device which has imprinted thereon the inscription "Note in America 1 RUB. No." and the figures 12907 written in with pen and ink. Below the oval is a long, narrow panel of shaded lines, but without lettering. The language style is that which was in use in Russia in the early part of the 18th century. At various times over the years there have been brief references to leather money supposed to have been used by the Russians in Alaska, but nothing positive was known. This specimen has just been acquired by Farren Zerbe, curator of the Chase National Bank Collection of Moneys of the World. No other specimen of this note is known to exist in this country, although a 10-kopek denomination is said to be in a Russian Museum.

More Commemoratives

Undaunted by the fate of recent bills introduced in Congress authorizing issues of commemorative coins, two new bills have been offered by widely-separated states. One would authorize the coinage of 50-cent pieces in commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the admission of the State of Washington to the Union. The other would provide for the issuance of half-dollars commemorating the 300th anniversary of the founding of the New Haven Colony, now New Haven, Connecticut.

South Africa's New Coins

A new set of silver and copper coins has been issued for South Africa. The set consists of 2 1/2 shillings, 2 shillings, 1 shilling, sixpence and threepence in silver, and the penny, half-penny and quarter-penny in bronze. A noticeable departure in metal is found in the minor coins. While the penny and half-penny are in ordinary copper and bronze the quarter penny or farthing is struck in a very dark gun-metal color material. Each coin in the set has a different reverse design, relieving the monotony of the series, as the obverse is the same throughout the set—the bare head of King George VI.

Jackson Birthday Recalls Money Situation

By William F. Sunday

THE 15th of March has become significant for the celebration of the birth of our seventh president, Andrew Jackson. "Jackson dinners" have recently become the vogue with the Democratic party.

We hear a lot about democracy at present with the threat of war hovering over Europe. Americans generally are satisfied with our present form of government. However, there are grave problems confronting the present regime, just as there were problems to be solved a century ago, when Andrew Jackson, the first "People's President," walked into the White House.

One of the first problems attacked by Jackson was the "money" situation, for it was during his first term that the powerful United States Bank secured a recharter, which Jackson opposed and vetoed, and which afterward became the chief issue of the campaign for his re-election.

The people apparently approved his action, for in the following November they re-elected him. With the confidence of the public support, Jackson proceeded to the gradual removal of government deposits in the United States Bank and together with new receipts, deposits were then placed in 23 carefully selected state banks.

Rugged Vermont Minted Coins Back in 1785

By William F. Sunday

AFTER the American colonies had achieved independence the privilege of providing their own coinage became their own sovereign right. The problem was promptly attacked by both the National Congress and by some of the states in order to relieve the citizens of the pressing need of an ampler supply of small coin, and likewise to eliminate from circulation the vast amount of light-weight and spurious coppers then commonly current.

Some of the states, during their loose confederation prior to the adoption of the constitution and the formation of the union, assumed the right of coining money.

One of the first states to issue copper pieces was Vermont, a commonwealth that had not formed one of the original 13 colonies.

First type, issued in 1785 ones which revolted, nor was Vermont at this time (1785) a state, not having been admitted to the union until 1791. However, in 1785 by authority of the assembly of Vermont, a contract was let to one Reuben Harmon to coin copper for a term which was first fixed at two years, but later extended to eight.

The contract provided that during the first three years all of the profits from the coinage were to go to Harmon to reimburse him for his outlay in providing a mint, while the remaining five years of the life of the contract he was to pay to the commonwealth two and one-half per cent of the amount coined.

Two types of coppers were struck under this contract, the first of which bore design portraying a central device representing an "all-seeing" eye, from which are 13 long and 13 short radiating rays, between the ends of which are interposed 13 stars, and around the border "Stella Quarta Decima." The reverse side shows the sun rising behind the "Green Mountains" atop which are pine trees and in the foreground is a plow. The border inscription is "Vermontis Res Publica" 1785. This first type was issued during the first three years and bear the dates 1785, 1786 and 1787.

The second type is void of any local character, which indicates that other devices were prescribed during the remaining five years of the contract with Harmon, in fact the law stated that the coins should now bear, "on one side a head," . . . "on the reverse, a woman," with appropriate inscriptions. No doubt the commonwealth found it more convenient to employ a type already familiar to the people, for the design is plainly a copy of the English penny of that period. The bust on the obverse, lauded and in cuirass is plainly an imitation of the English King George and the figure on the reverse which was to be taken as emblematic of Liberty is only Britannia with a different sentiment expressed by the inscription "INDE ET LIB." Independence and Liberty.

Literally tons of these "Vermont" cents were produced by Harmon under the terms of the contract, but today few choice specimens of these have survived, particularly those bearing the date 1785. Those dated 1787 or 1788 are more numerous.

The attempt to reduce the state bank-notes in circulation by the increase in the coinage of gold coins proved fruitless, and finally Jackson resorted to the issue of the "Specie Circular" on July 11, 1836, which compelled the banks and agents to accept only gold and silver after Aug. 15 in payment for public land. The effect of this decree soon caused the collapse of overspeculative banks who were unable to redeem their notes, and resulted finally in the suspension of specie payments by the banks in 1837.

This action soon led to the people's hoarding of "hard money," gold and silver and even copper coins disappearing from circulation and to relieve the dearth of coins, merchants and business men soon issued "tokens," which were accepted to make change and facilitate trade.

Illustrated is a typical example of the "Jackson Cent" as it depicts on one side a bust of Jackson in uniform on a money chest, holding a sword in his right hand and in the other the money bag, while the inscription reads, "I Take The * Responsibility *." The reverse shows the "Democratic" jackass, with "Roman firmness" above, and "veto" below. Around the border is "The Constitution As I Understand It" Regarded as only souvenirs, by many today, nevertheless, the "Jackson cents" served a worthy purpose a century ago during a hectic period of our country when "democracy" was really appreciated by the people.

Washington Shy On Being Paid Coin Honor

By William F. Sunday

THE 22nd day of February marks another anniversary of the birth of the "father of our country," George Washington.

Not only is Washington honored as "father of the country" but as sponsor of our national currency as well, for it was he, as first President, who signed the resolution to establish a mint at Philadelphia (1792) for the striking of the official coins of the United States.

There were many who deemed it appropriate to have the likeness of Washington adorn the first federal coins, and numerous "patterns" were submitted for consideration to the committee, among which were a number bearing the effigy of Washington. The committee was favorably impressed with some of the "Washington" designs and recommended their adoption. However, when the matter was brought to the attention of the President he most emphatically declined the honor and as a result the first coins bore a female head of "Liberty" instead.

Washington half-dollar,
rejected in 1792

It is said that Washington's repugnance of a style of currency so closely resembling that of a monarchy and his personal feelings against appearing so conspicuously on the coins of our country, were largely responsible for his refusal to accept such a singular honor. A number of copper pieces bearing the head of Washington were struck both here and abroad, by speculators, who introduced them into circulation where ever there was a pressing need of small coin.

Some of these 18th century coppers were dated 1783, 1785, 1791 and 1792 and actually saw service in lieu of a cent before our mint product was issued in March, 1793. One of the most prized of "Washington" coins is the silver half-dollars dated 1792, of which only few are known to be in existence. These half-dollars bear the bust of Washington in military uniform, and the date 1792 below, and around the edge G. WASHINGTON PRESIDENT I. On the reverse is a heraldic eagle, with a shield on breast, and 15 stars above, while around the edge the legend, "UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. (Illustrated).

The eagle design is similar to the design on our great seal from which it was no doubt copied. A specimen of this "Washington" half-dollar recently brought $60 in a "coin auction."

Thus, over 200 years after Washington's objection, his portrait finally was adopted for our national coinage with the appearance of the new quarter dollars in 1932.

They looked like fish hooks . . . they were about the same size as fish hooks . . . but they weren't fish hooks to the natives of Ceylon . . . they constituted good, silver money

GOT CHANGE FOR A HOOK?

By William F. Sunday

OF THE many forms of money in use in various parts of the world, one of the most peculiar is the Larin or fish hook money of Ceylon. These are fashioned from slender pieces of silver wire of various thickness and length, after which they are bent double, with the ends curved up in fish hook form.

The name Larin or Lari is derived from the city of Lar in Persia where these odd pieces first were made by the King of Lar. He was a powerful king in that country early in the 16th Century. The use of the Larin soon spread along the west coast of India and finally reached its widest circulation on the island of Ceylon. Here the native name for the Larin is Koku Ridi, meaning hook silver, hence the English term fish hook money.

Since the metal used to make the Larin is pure silver, this form of currency gained widespread popularity among traders and merchants along the Persian Gulf.

Soon most of the business was transacted with the Larin instead of other coins then current in Europe. Portuguese and Spanish traders and caravan leaders were forced to exchange their money for Larins in order to transact business. The majority of Larins are from three to four inches long and anywhere from an eighth of an inch to nearly a quarter inch wide. All bear an inscription or impression of the flattened end where the wire has been doubled.

There are three distinct types of this money. The first of these is the Persian, which consists of a piece of silver wire bent double and slightly flattened at the folded end and bearing an inscription. The second is the Indian type which is usually made from a straight piece of silver wire about one inch long and flattened about the full length, which has the appearance of a date stone. The last is the Ceylon type which has the upturned ends like a fish hook.

These peculiar pieces were prized by the silversmiths, because of their pure, soft silver. Smiths melted them down, after which the metal was fashioned into silver ornaments.

Coin Collectors Convene

Members of the American Numismatic Association will convene at Columbus, Ohio, for the annual convention to be held in that city from Aug. 13 to 18th inclusive. One of the outstanding features of this gathering is the large and valuable exhibition of rare coins which will be displayed free to the public.

In addition, this group of the world's leading collectors will celebrate the golden jubilee of the founding of the "Numismatic," the official organ of the ANA, a magazine devoted to the science of numismatics.

It was in the fall of 1888 that Dr. George F. Heath of Monroe, Mich., realized his long-cherished desire to publish a magazine for coin collectors. It was not until four years later that he succeeded in forming the American Numismatic Association, which today has a membership of thousands of ardent coin collectors scattered all over the world.

Arrangements have been made to have at the Columbus convention the old hand press used in printing the first issues of the "Numismatic." This is now owned by Donald R. Heath of Detroit, a son of Doctor Heath, who will be present and put in type the first page of the first issue of the "Numismatic," using the original type, and run off copies as souvenirs for those attending the convention.

Chosen from entries of 55 sculptors, the "war and peace" medal above was awarded the Lindsey Morris Memorial prize of $300. It was designed by Chester Beach, New York City.

'Lincoln' Cents, Now Common, Once Created Sensation

By William F. Sunday

THIS month we observe the birthday of the great emancipator, Abraham Lincoln. Despite the fact that Lincoln was honored, respected and loved by thousands, it required several unsuccessful attempts to have his portrait adorn our national coinage. He was born Feb. 12, 1809, but it was not until the 100th anniversary of his birth, 1909, that the powers that be decided that Lincoln's profile should appear on a regular issue of our minor coins. Thus the appearance of the "Lincoln" cents in 1909 created a sensation, since they were the first coins issued for general circulation which bore the portrait of a president. Too they were struck in honor of the 100th anniversary of the birth of President Lincoln.

The design was from a photograph, then in the possession of Charles Elliot Norton, and plaster models were executed by Victor D. Brenner, a successful medalist of that time. However, the "Lincoln" cents had only been in circulation one day when an objectional feature was discovered in that the initials of the designer (V. D. B.) were displayed on reverse side of the new coins, which was considered illegal.

New dies were prepared on which the initials did not appear and the storm of protests subsided, but the incident was not easily forgotten. It seems that the impression prevailed that but a few of these coins from the earlier die had been issued before the die was destroyed and replaced by a new hub.

But alas their dreams were shattered, for 27,995,000 pieces were issued, and none was ever recalled, so the coins could not become rare.

Thus the "Lincoln" cents of 1909 with the initials on the back are quite common today and may be purchased for a few cents each in bright "new" condition. In fact dealers in coins are so well stocked that they do not offer a premium for the first Lincoln cents.

Illustrated is an emancipation model issued in 1863. It is symbolic of the successful efforts of Lincoln to free the Negro slaves, for it was on Jan. 1, 1863, that he signed the Proclamation of Emancipation. The obverse bears a bust of Lincoln, while on the reverse side an open hand is shown with the broken shackles in the background and above the date, 1863.

Tales of the Time When U. S. Coins Were Born

By William F. Sunday

INTERESTING facts gleaned from accounts kept by the officers in charge of the first mint deal with the difficulties encountered in producing our first national coinage. For a period of nearly ten years (1783-1793) Thomas Jefferson had worked on the plan to establish the first United States Mint. Finally in October of 1793 the first buildings were completed.

Operations were commenced shortly afterward, when a few trial or pattern coins were struck in copper. Henry Voigt was the first chief coiner, appointed by President Washington on Jan. 29, 1793. On Dec. 17, 1792, he made the following entry in his account book:

"Struck off a few pieces of copper coins."

The next day Thomas Jefferson wrote the president as follows:

"Thomas Jefferson has the honor to send the president 2 cents made on Voigt's plan by putting a silver plug worth $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cent into the center of a copper worth $\frac{3}{4}$ of a cent. Mr. Rittenhouse is about to make a few by mixing this same type of plug by fusion with the same amount of copper. He will then make some of copper alone of the same size and lastly he will make the real cent as ordered by Congress 4 times as big. Specimens of these several ways of making the cent will be delivered to the Committee of Congress now having the subject before them."

These first experimental pieces with the silver center were submitted by Bob Birch who was employed at the mint in the engraving department, and are known to numismatists as the 'Birch Patterns.' These were the forerunners of our first National coinage.

First Designer

Joseph Wright, a portrait painter, was appointed by Washington as the first designer and die-sinker. He died of yellow fever in 1793. However, the first design officially adopted for the first regular issue of coins (copper cents) was not the work of Wright. Jean Pierre Droz, Swiss engraver who was born in 1746 and died in 1823, was engaged to cut the dies for the first regular issue, the "chain reverse" type.

Later the design was changed and chain device was eliminated in favor of a wreath of olive leaves. Wright cut the dies for this second design. Still another design was employed in 1793. This is known to collectors as the "Liberty Cap" type. Robert Scott cut these dies and also some of the dies for the cents struck in 1794.

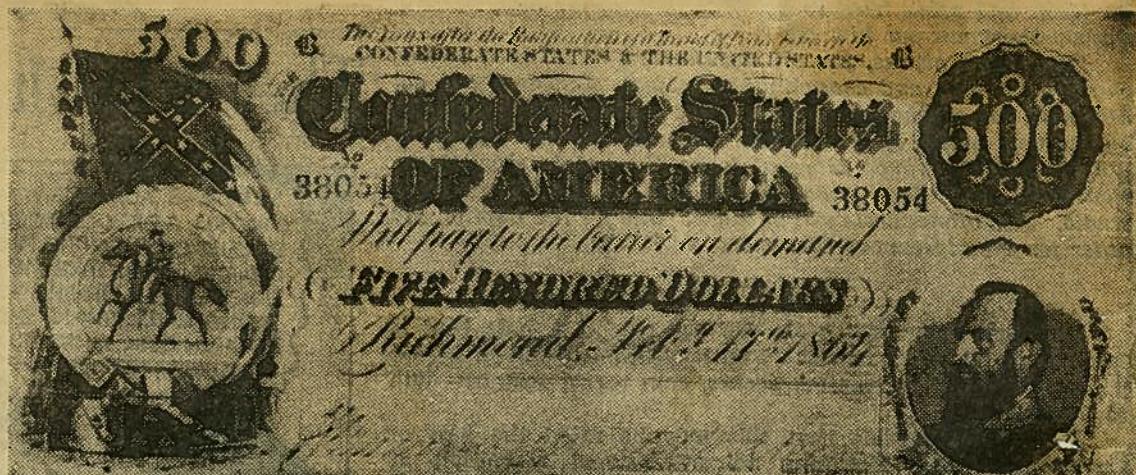

First Silver Bullion Deposit

The first silver received at the mint was deposited by the Bank of Maryland on July 28, 1794. It consisted of French silver coins, weighing 69,692 ounce and was entered as Deposit Number 1. From this Deposit Number 1 the chief coiner delivered to the treasurer of the mint the first silver coins struck for circulation. They consist of 17,058 silver dollars and were turned over to the treasurer on Oct. 15, 1794. On Dec. 1, he delivered 5,300 half-dollars.

On Old Confederate Currency and a Famous Old Poem

By William F. Sunday

ACH Memorial Day finds the ranks of Civil War veterans diminished that but few survivors today recall the heroic struggle between the North and the South. However, thousands of souvenirs in the form of old, repudiated currency still are in existence as a numismatic record of a nation of 9,000,000 souls that maintained a precarious existence in the face of overwhelming odds for nearly four and a half years. Thousands of dollars in paper currency was issued by the Southern Confederacy during the Civil War, much of which was used to pay the soldiers. Most of it was repudiated when the cause of the South was lost. These notes were a promise to pay. But, ced with empty coffers, the treasury was unable to redeem them, so today these serve as mute reminders of a nation that did. The notes were issued from 1861 to 1864 in denominations of cents, $1, $2, $5, $10, $20, $50, $100, $500 and $1,000. The earlier issues of 1861 were printed at Montgomery, Ala., while the later issues were printed at Richmond, Va. Worth only a few cents each as souvenirs, any of these old bills still are being brought to light today to use a temporary thrill of anticipation to the finder, who later learns they are practically worthless. Since a number of the bills are printed on one side only, the blank reverse side often was utilized to make notations by officers and soldier of the South.

Some of them have been found containing messages and crude verse, and one of these, a five-hundred bill of the last issue (1864) contained the famous poem, "The Lost Cause," written by Major S. A. Jones while he was stopping at the Powhatan Hotel, Richmond, Va.

"The Lost Cause"
Representing nothing on God's earth now
And naught in the waters below it,
As the pledge of a nation that's dead and gone
Keep it, dear friend, and show it.
Show it to those who will lend an ear
To the tale that this paper can tell.

acknowledged to be one of the most powerful writings attributed directly to the Civil War

Of liberty born of the patriot's dream,
Of a storm-cradled nation that fell.
Too poor to possess the precious ores
And too much of a stranger to borrow,
We issued to-day our promise to pay
And hoped to redeem on the morrow.

The days rolled by, and the weeks became years,
But our coffers were empty still;
Coin was so rare that the Treasury'd quake
If a dollar should drop in the till.
But the faith that was in us was strong indeed,
And poverty well we discerned,
And this little check represented the pay

That our suffering veterans earned.
We knew it had hardly a value in gold,
Yet as gold each soldier received it.
It gazed in our eyes with a promise to pay,
And each Southern patriot believed it.
But our boys thought little of price or of pay
Or of bills that were overdue;
We knew if it bought us our bread to-day
Twas the best our poor country could do.
Keep it; it tells all our history o'er,
From the birth of the dream to its last.
Modest and born of the angel Hope,
Like our hope of success, it passed.

Congress' Tribute to Washington

By William F. Sunday

A MEDAL which few people have seen, and about which the public has little information, is the unique gold medallion presented to the Father of our Country by Congress on March 25, 1776.

This medal was the only gold medal given by Congress to General George Washington, for his services in expelling the British forces from Boston on the 17th of March, 1776. It was struck at the Paris mint and the designs were executed by the famous French artist Pierre Simon Benjamin Duvivier, who was engaged at the request of the Continental Congress and arrangements were made by John Adams and two associates.

by the legend, in latin: "Georgio Washington Svpremo Dvce Evercivvm Adsertori Libertatis Comitia Americana" (The American Congress To George Washington, Commander-in-Chief of Its Armies, Protector of Liberty).

The other side shows Washington and his aides all mounted viewing from the Dorchester Heights (South Boston) the town of Boston below and the retreating British vessels. In the foreground are two cannon and cannon shot. Between the mounted figures and the harbor a fortified portion of the Heights may be seen and below, troops are deploying on the level ground. On the inner rim at top are the words: "Hostibus Primo Fugatis", and below the design, Bostonium Recuperatum XVII Martii MDCCCLXXVI.
